Parthenon. West Pediment. Drawing combining extant fragments with Carrey's drawings. After Berger. (The originals are in London unless otherwise stated). The figures drawn by Carrey are left plain

A – reclining hero (or river god, 'Ilissos'; cf. 18.A,P). B, C – King Kekrops and daughter, coiled snake between them. D-F – perhaps Kekrops' other daughters and between them his son Erysichthon. G – Athena's charioteer, probably Nike. H – Hermes. I, K – the horses' belly may have been supported by a Triton. L – Athena (London and part of head in Acr.). M – Poseidon, cf. 81. Between L and M many place an olive tree (of which there are scraps which might belong); or Zeus' thunderbolt (Simon). N – winged attendant of Poseidon's chariot, probably Iris. O – Poseidon's charioteer, his consort Amphitrite; a sea-serpent (ketos) with porcine snout below. P, Q, R – woman with 2 children, probably Oreithyia, the Attic princess with Kalais and Zetes. S, T, U – a youth on a woman's lap and another woman. V – kneeling male. W – reclining woman. 'Kephalos and Prokris' for V and W are implausible. Local river or fountain (Kallirhoe) deities are suggested (cf. A, and Olympia east, according to Paus.). Probably all (A-F, P-W) are Attic royalty or heroes

Hephaisteion. East frieze. In situ. H. 0.85.
1-5 - Warriors bind a prisoner (3), the last (5) moving right but looking back. 6-8 - Gods seated on rocks, observing 9-21: 6 - Athena holding spear in right hand (?), drilled holes for attachment of aegis; 7 - probably Hera, in view of - 8 - probably Zeus, sceptre in left hand. 9-14 - Warriors fight, with spears, swords, shield, probably 9, 11 and the fallen 12 against 10, 13, 14. 15-19 - Men fight with boulders; the slipping mantle of 15 is heroic (cf. Olympia 19M) and might be Theseus, but his weapon is missing; the fallen 18 might be his companion. 20, 21 - Two warriors make off right. 22-24 - Gods seated on rocks, observing 9-21: 22 - Poseidon or Hephaistos, and if the former - 23 - Amphitrite; 24 - a god. 25-29 - Warriors prepare for battle, 26 and 27 are paired, 29 is stringing his bow. The heroic boulder-fight (15-19) seems the core of a more conventional battle with preparation to the right (25-29) and action still contemplated but a prisoner taken (3), an unusual motif and so presumably significant at left (1-5). The gods are on a different plane, perhaps Olympus, but set within the range of the action, not to one side as on the Siphnian Treasury (GSAP fig. 212.2)
